Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for your letter of 25 June 1962 containing the additional thoughts on your space vehicle surveillance system forwarded in April. After reviewing this matter with others in the Agency, it was decided that it probably would not be fruitful for us to proceed with a more detailed consideration of this proposal.

First, the Central Intelligence Agency is, of course, an interested observer of ideas and developments which could conceivably have an effect on its responsibilities but this role does not mean it has primary responsibility within the Government for the pursuit of such projects. In this case we are not in a position to provide the kind of impetus you desire for your proposal. Second, I think it would be accurate to say that your proposal falls within a technical field that is receiving intensive investigation both by private contractors and the managers of the Government's space program.

Despite the rather negative tone of these remarks, let me assure you once again of our appreciation for your efforts in this proposal and for your kindness in transmitting it to us.

Sincerely yours,
